

Richard Hadfield

Logica Education & Skills team

Richard heads Logica's UK Education team.

He joined Logica from BT, where in his early career, he performed various client management roles culminating in leading the company's global Cisco account team. In 2000 Richard ran a Business Development team working with the Internet Service Provider marketplace and between 2001-2002 launched BT's first unmetered and business and consumer broadband solutions. A focus upon education broadband solutions led Richard to the public sector business within BT latterly as Head of Education and Skills the very same role he now performs for Logica. He has worked with various education bodies from government departments, agencies to schools.